Siobhan O'Brien - Ireland

Siobhán O'Brien wears her influences on her proverbial sleeve. Inspired by the vintage songwriters of an earlier era — Joni Mitchell in particular, but also Leonard Cohen, Joan Baez, Jackson Brown, among them — she adheres to old school designs that combine to create a meld of contemporary soft rock and plaintive folk finesse. A fourth generation Irish musician, O'Brien made an easy connection between her Celtic roots and the obvious appeal shared in a charismatic contemporary caress. You Can't Run Out Of Love, her third album to date, reveals hints of her old country origins, but also shows her comfort with a sound most would consider more mainstream.
